Photoshop on a platform Although Photoshop is available on Macintosh, Windows, and Linux computer platforms, for this book Photoshop is designed for Windows operating systems. This section provides the basics for setting up Photoshop on a Windows system. An image may be the only kind of file you need to manipulate in Photoshop. You can save it to your hard drive or CD or move it to your printer. However, the versatility of Photoshop comes from the fact that you can use it on many different kinds of computers. As long as you have a camera or scanner that supports creating a TIFF file, it's possible to use Photoshop on any system that can create and open TIFF files. And that's exactly what this book does — it shows you how to use Photoshop to create, modify, and print TIFF files on a variety of computers and operating systems. Photoshop CS3 has three editions on the market, and this book focuses on the more expensive ($595) Professional and CS3 Extended Editions. The entry-level Professional Edition is the basic version, and it has all the same basic editing and printing capabilities as the other two editions. In addition, it has automatic exposure and auto white balance, which saves you from having to manually perform these tasks. The more advanced options are found only in the other two editions. Also, the Professional Edition doesn't include any tutorials that demonstrate the use of some of Photoshop's most advanced features.

This great program is easier to use and more intuitive than many, if not all, of the offerings from Adobe Systems. As a user interface rookie I was able to jump right in and pick up the tools I needed to edit and tweak my photos quickly. The program also comes with filters and tools for adding layers that are not available elsewhere. A great way to layer and blend images, the Blend Tool works much like the one in Photoshop, only it lets you blend several different layers on top of one another. While not essential, the Blend Tool is great for you to experiment with and get an idea of how you can make the photos in your toolkit look even better. [tab title="Alphabetical"] Nearest Approximation Like Photoshop, Elements works great when you have a good internet connection. Unlike Photoshop though, this free app will download the data for the image you are working on to your computer. This can be a slight speed delay, but with a good internet connection it's much faster than paying to load each image over the internet. [divider style="dotted" margin="10px"] Basic Instincts [tab title="Alphabetical"] While Elements is not a Photoshop replacement and does not offer the same level of functionality, it is also not a basic Photoshop application. It offers the ability to make only simple edits like cropping, brightness, contrast, and sharpening, without having to buy additional software that you won't need. Unlike Photoshop, Elements does not support layer masks, however, it does support blend modes like screen, soft light, and hard light. E a681f4349e

Q: How to access the Django REST framework's ModelSerializer() from a different class than the Model in question? I am trying to teach myself Django REST Framework. I have the following code (simplified): class EmployeeSerializer(ModelSerializer): class Meta: model = Employee fields = '__all__' class TaskSerializer(ModelSerializer): start_date = serializers.DateField(format='%Y-%m-%d') end_date = serializers.DateField(format='%Y-%m-%d') user = serializers.IntegerField(required=True) # REMOVED a LOT of "fields I don't need" class Meta: model = Task fields = '__all__' class TaskApp(APIView): def get(self, request): employees = Employee.objects.all() serializer = EmployeeSerializer(employees, many=True) return Response(serializer.data) This code fails, as serializer = EmployeeSerializer(employees, many=True) is not a valid assignment as no instance of the EmployeeSerializer exists yet. My question is, how do I go about approaching this? My goal is to be able to use the EmployeeSerializer from the TaskView. A: As you've noticed, only the code in the TaskApp's view can instantiate the serializer. In order to reference the serializer in the view, you have to pass it as an argument to TaskApp. In the view, serializer can then be accessed via the argument name you passed as keyword argument (i.e. serializer). class EmployeeSerializer(ModelSerializer): class Meta: model = Employee fields = '__all__' class TaskSerializer(ModelSerializer): start_date = serializers.DateField(format='%
